Handbook of Ocular Infections, Inflammation, and External Diseases George M. Bohigian 2000 Drs. Bohigian and Valluri have put together an update of inflammatory diseases of the eye, including clinical, laboratory, and therapeutic issues. This concise, quick reference is practical and useful for all ophthalmologists. This handy manual contains current information on infectious keratitis and endophthalmitis, along with prevalent infectious diseases of the eye. Clearly written, the text contains common signs and symptoms associated with specific infections and external diseases of the eye, allowing you to quickly and easily diagnose ocular disease. There is also a chapter on endophthalmitis that can be used to quickly assess the best antibiotic for specific infections and how to prepare these antibiotics to be administered. The chapter is enhanced by tables of antibiotics.

A Handbook of the Diseases of the Eye Henry R. Swanzy 2018-01-25 Excerpt from A Handbook of the Diseases of the Eye: And Their Treatment The fifth edition of this book was issued in January, 1895, and has been for some months out of print. In this edition the pages in the first chapter of former editions on Some Elementary Optics have been omitted to make room in the book for other matter. After all, it may be reasonably expected that the student will bring with him to the study of eye disease, not only a good knowledge of the anatomy and physiology of the eye, but also that acquaintance with optical laws which is required for the proper understanding of the refraction and accommodation of the eye, and of the theory of the ophthalmoscope. Diseases of the Eye G. E. De Schweinitz 2015-07-10 Excerpt from Diseases of the Eye: A Handbook of Ophthalmic Practice for Students and Practitioners In the Eighth Edition of this text-book its chapters have been revised thoroughly in an endeavor to include due reference to the important ophthalmic observations and therapeutic measures which have been made and recommended during the last three years. A new feature in this edition is the introduction of the metric equivalents of the doses of the remedies and the strengths of the solutions previously recorded only according to the old system. Reference to the following subjects appears for the first time: Clifford Walker's Method of Testing the Visual Field; Squirrel Plague Conjunctivitis; Swimming Bath Conjunctivitis; Anaphylactic Keratitis; Family Cerebral Degeneration with Macular Changes; the Ocular Symptoms of Disease of the Pituitary Body; Sclerectomy with a Punch (Holth's Operation); Preliminary Capsulotomy (Homer Smith's Operation); Iridotaxis (Borthcn's Method); Thread Drainage of the Anterior Chamber (Zorab's Operation); Extraction of Cataract in the Capsule after Subluxation of the Lens with Capsule Forceps (Stanculeanu's Method, Arnold Knapp's Method); Capsulomuscular Advancement with Partial Resection (Ziegler's Method); Tenotomy of the Inferior Oblique; Window Resection of the Nasal Duct (West's Operation). A portion of the chapter on Iritis has been rewritten, especially as it relates to Autotoxemie Iritis and Iritis Secondary to Mucous Membrane Infections. Lieut. Col. Elliot has very kindly written the description of Corneoscleral Trephining, ordinarily known as Elliot's Operation. To Dr. William M. Sweet the author is indebted for a description of his revised method of localizing foreign bodies within the eye by means of the x-rays. As in previous editions, the section devoted to Skiascopy, or the Shadow Test, is from the pen of Dr. Edward Jackson. A number of new illustrations have been inserted. The entire work has been reset and appears in a new and greatly improved form. The author trusts that these additions and alterations will prove to be satisfactory, and he desires again to express his high appreciation of the cordial reception which has thus far been accorded to his work. Atlas of External Diseases of the Eye (Classic Reprint) Richard Greeff 2015-08-04 Excerpt from Atlas of External Diseases of the Eye At the request of the publisher I have undertaken the difficult task of trying to reproduce in English Greeff's beautiful Atlas, and at the same time to render the work as a whole of more utility to the general practitioner. In many places in the original text the reader receives the impression that the author has been cut short in what he wished to say, perhaps by the limitations of space, perhaps by the feeling that he was writing for specialists who were quite well acquainted with the subject. This is particularly true of treatment, which is often dismissed with a few words. I have therefore added much of detail, and have tried to incorporate the latest advances in this branch of ophthalmology. In order that no confusion may arise between the work of the distinguished author and that of the humbler editor, I have enclosed in brackets [] everything that is not to be found in the original text. Handbook of the Diseases of the Eye A.

Salomons 2015-07-11 Excerpt from Handbook of the Diseases of the Eye: Their Pathology and Treatment The rapid advancement of medicine during the present century has rendered it impossible to acquire a proper knowledge of its different departments, during the brief time usually allotted by students to its study. We have deemed it expedient, therefore, to present this branch in a condensed form; at the same time trying to preserve whatever has been actually acquired to the science of ophthalmology. The book is divided into two parts: the first includes the pathology and treatment of eye-diseases; and the second, the operative surgery of the eye. The practical portions of the work are given with as much detail as possible, and from the experience of the author; and it is hoped they will prove a useful guide, not alone to those entering this interesting department of medicine, but also to the busy practitioner, who finds himself unable to peruse the more elaborate treatises on this subject. Diseases of the Eye George Edmund De Schweinitz 2017-10-27 Excerpt from Diseases of the Eye: A Hand-Book of Ophthalmic Practice, for Students and Practitioners Dr. James Wallace, Chief of the Eye Dispensary of the University Hospital, has written Chapters I. And IV. That portion of Chapter III. Which relates to reflection, the oph thalmoscope and its theory, and the explanation of the direct and indirect method; and that part of Chapter XIX. Which describes the mechanism of diplopia, the rotation of the eyeball around the Visual line, and the causes of concomitant convergent and divergent squint. He has also given valuable advice and assistance in reading the sheets for the press. Dr. Edward Jackson, Professor of Ophthalmology in the Philadelphia Polyclinic, has written the section on Retinoscopy. The author is indebted to these gentlemen for their aid, and for the pre sentation of the subjects entrusted to them in a manner which, he feels sure, will be satisfactory to students. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
